WAR DEPARTMENT.

Downing-Street, October 6, 1813.

DISPATCHES, of which the following are the effects, have been this day received at Bathurst's Office, addressed to his Lordship by Field-Marshal the Marquess of Wellington, dated Lezaca, 19th and 27th September 1813.

NOTHING of importance has occurred since I addressed your Lordship on the 10th instant, in the positions of the army.

The garrison of Pamplona having made several sorties during the blockade, in all of which they were repulsed with loss, made one in considerable force on the 10th, possibly with a view to reconnoitre the force by which the blockade was maintained, but they were immediately driven in. Mariscal de Campo Don Carlos d'España, who commands the blockade, was unfortunately wounded, but is still able to exercise his command; and he has reported most favourably of the officers and troops employed under his command on this occasion.

Lezaca, September 27, 1813.

I HAVE the honour to enclose the copy of a dispatch of the 15th and 17th instant, which I have received from Lieutenant-General Lord William Bentinck, from which it appears that his advanced guard, under Colonel Adam, was attacked by a considerable force of the enemy, on the night of the 12th instant, in the pass of Ordal; and that they were obliged to retire with the loss of four pieces of artillery. I hope that the loss of men has not been considerable; but I have not received the particulars of that sustained by the corps engaged on this occasion.

It gives me great satisfaction to report, that the Spanish troops engaged, viz. the regiments of Badajoz, Tiradores de Cadiz, and Voluntarios de Aragon, being a brigade of infantry belonging to General Sarisfield's division of the second army, behaved remarkably well, as well as the 2d battalion 27th regiment, the Calabrese light infantry, and the 20th companies of the 4th line battalion Kings German legion, and of De Roll's regiment. In consequence of this event Lieutenant-General Lord William Bentinck retired to the neighbourhood of Tarragona, and the enemy have, I understand, again recrossed the Lobregat.

Nothing extraordinary has occurred in front of the army under my immediate command.

Extract of a Dispatch from Lieutenant-General Lord William Bentinck, K. B. to Field-Marshal the Marquess of Wellington, K. G. dated Tarragona, the 15th and 17th September 1813.

ACCORDING to the intention expressed in my letter of the 27th of August, the army moved forward, and arrived at Villa Franca on the 11th September. All the intelligence continued to corroborate the departure of a considerable part of the French force to France. It was only on the 27th that doubts began to be entertained of the truth of this fact. It appears that great detachments had been made with convoys going to France, who returned with others of salt meat and ammunition, and as far as I can learn, not above three thousand men have left Catalonia. The position had been discovered by the removal of the officers, and all the Spanish employed, and by the preparations made for the defence and supply of Barcelona.

The French force had been withdrawn to the Lobregat, at Sabadell, and about Barcelona.

On the 11th the enemy united about twelve thousand men at Molin de Rey, with his disposable forces from the Ampurdan; and the garrison had arrived at Barcelona, and everything appeared to indicate a general movement.

The British army were posted at Villa Franca, and in the villages in its front, as far as the mountains on the Lobregat. The pass of Ordal, over which passes the great road, was occupied by the advance of the army, under Colonel Adam, and three battalions of General Sarisfield's division. The pass was very strong, and I had no apprehension of its being forced. The probable date of attack, as being a certain one, was by turning our left by Martorell and San Sadurn, where was posted the first army.

I had not numbers equal to those which the French could bring against me; I had been obliged to leave the division of General Whittingham at Rens and Vals, from the want of provisions and means of transport. The division of General Sarisfield was also without subsistence, but in order not to retire entirely to the rear, or to be unprepared to take advantage of any favourable circumstances, I took upon myself to anticipate the supplies which I knew were coming from General Elia, and which I could command from being embarked in British transports. I doubted the intention of the enemy to advance, but if he did, the strong post in my front, or the detour by Mastareil, if coming by that road, would give me ample time to retreat in security.

On the 12th, however, at midnight the enemy attacked the pass of Ordal, and carried it, after an obstinate resistance, by great superiority in numbers. The corps were obliged to save themselves in the mountains, and two six pounders with two mountain guns, unfortunately fell into the enemy's hands. The only consolation I have to offer, is the bravery both of British and Spaniards; of the steadiness and gallantry of the latter, every British officer present speaks in terms of the highest admiration. I am sorry to say that Colonel Adam has been severely wounded, as well as Lieutenant-Colonel Reeves, and several other valuable officers of the 2d battalion of the 27th regiment. The Calabrese did not suffer materially. I can give no exact return of our loss, but I hope it will eventually not be considerable. I have heard of two thousand men having joined Colonel Manzo, near San Sadurni, among whom are two hundred of our own troops, and great numbers have already joined from different parts of the coast, and are hourly coming in. I immediately put the army in retreat; the enemy's dragoons and cuirassiers pressed closely upon us, but they were so gallantly charged, though in very superior numbers, by our own cavalry, that about mid-day they gave up the pursuit.

I am much indebted to Colonel Lord Frederick Bentinck, for the judgement and spirit with which he directed the operations of his brigade. The 20th dragoons, commanded by Lieutenant-Colonel Hunter; the Brunswick Hussars, by Lieutenant-Colonel Schraeter, and the Sicilian cavalry, by Captain Chagnette, very much distinguished themselves. The army made their retreat without any loss to Vendrells, from whence it marched again the same night to Altiella, and yesterday evening took up its ground in front of this town.

September 17th. I enclose the reports of the different officers commanding corps, and the artillery of the affair of Ordal, for your Lordship's information.

September 17th, Nine P. M.—I have just received intelligence, that the enemy left Villa Franca this morning, and have returned to Molino de Rey on the Llobregat. I enclose a list of the killed and wounded.

My Lord, Tarragona, September 15, 1813.

I HAVE the honour to inform you, that about Eleven o'clock on the evening of the 12th, the enemy attacked the picquets posted in front of the position of Ordal. The Calabrian free corps had been previously moved from the hill, on the left of the position, to occupy the ground more to its right, on which is the ruin of an old fort. At twelve the enemy attempted to force the pass; the time of night made it impossible to ascertain precisely what were the enemy's intentions, or to discover the extent of his force; the attack on the left of the road was resisted with great gallantry, and the enemy were repeatedly driven back by the Spanish troops, which had occupied the ground between the road and the place on which I was posted; the principal force of the enemy were directed against the right of the position. About two o'clock Captain Baron Guarnis reported to me, that Colonel Adam and Lieutenant-Colonel Reeves were both wounded, that the enemy were gaining ground and overpowering the troops on the right. I advanced with the Calabrians and attacked the left of the enemy's column. The enemy had already succeeded in turning the right of the position, and the troops that had defended that flank were obliged to retire; I therefore determined to fall back, keeping the hills on the left of the road.

At daylight I sent a patrol into the valley of San Sadurni, and in consequence of the information that the town of San Sadurni was occupied by Spanish troops, I marched with the intention of rejoining the army by the road leading from thence to Villa Franca; after crossing the river which was in front of the town, I was attacked by a considerable column of the enemy, both infantry and cavalry, and forced back towards the Barcelona road. I succeeded in crossing the main road unperceived by the enemy, and from thence proceeded in the direction of Sedes, in the hope that the enemy had not occupied that place, and that I should be able to embark the corps there, or at Villa Nueva, which I have the satisfaction to report was effected at the former place, during the night of the 13th.

I have the honour to transmit to your Lordship, the reports of the attack on the right of the position, which I have received from Captain Müller, commanding De Roll's rifle company; and from Captain Waldron, who commanded the 2d battalion of the 27th regiment, after Lieutenant-Colonel Reeves and Captain Mills had been wounded. I am, &c.

Lieutenant-General Lord William Bentinck, &c. &c. &c.

SIR, Tarragona, September 15, 1813.

AGREEABLY to your directions, I beg leave to report to you the following occurrences, which took place on the night of the 12th instant.

The enemy attacked the position of Ordal at about midnight. I defended an old work, which commanded the main road, with the rifle companies of De Roll's regiment and that of the 4th battalion King's German legion, besides two companies of the 27th regiment. We resisted a considerable time the repeated attacks of the enemy, but our ranks being at last much thinned, whilst the attacks of the enemy became more and more impetuous, we were at last driven from the old redoubt. I rallied the troops about sixty paces in rear of it, behind some old ruins, from which place we succeeded twice to retake the higher part of our old position, attacking, in conjunction with the Spanish brigade, which was close on our left, and which fought and charged with the greatest intrepidity.

We had fought for about an hour and half on these spots, when Baron Guarnis came up, and informed me that it was to give directions to our troops there, as Colonels Adam and Reeves were wounded. I immediately proceeded to the right, where the 27th regiment was posted, and desired some of my party to follow me. I had scarcely joined them, when I was informed that the enemy were turning our right flank; I occasioned this to be reinforced, but it was in vain they attempted to withstand any longer, the enemy continuing to gain ground. At the same moment I saw the Spanish brigade on our left retiring; there was not a moment to be lost, and I ordered the 27th regiment to retire. We gained the main road, for the purpose of arriving at a hill, in rear of the first position, before the enemy could get possession of it: in this we succeeded. We continued our retreat, keeping close to the right of the main road, during the whole night, meeting at several times parties of the enemy on all sides. I was in hopes that by daylight, the progress of the latter would be stopped, and offer me the means of joining some of our troops; but being disappointed in this, I gained by that time the higher part of the woods, and was not discovered by the enemy till I had gained the village of Bonneoles, but his attempt to prevent our retreat was fruitless.

Our march was of the most fatiguing nature that can be imagined; many men, worn out by fatigue, remained behind, so that the party with which I joined the first division (by about two o'clock in the afternoon), consisted only of about seventy men; but I can assert, that a great number are still in the woods, and will be able to join.

I have omitted to say, that the artillery under Captain Arabin had been ordered to retire about half an hour before the position was forced, and previous to my succeeding to the command. The guns have been overtaken by the enemy's cavalry near Venta de Ordal.

I am, &c.

Lieutenant-Colonel Carey, commanding
Catalanese Free Corps.

SIR, Tarragona, September 15, 1813.

ON the night of the 12th instant, about twelve o'clock, the enemy, in great force, attacked the position of the 2d battalion 27th regiment at Ordal; and shortly after, Lieutenant-Colonel Reeves and Captain Mills being wounded, the command of the battalion devolved upon me. At this time the fire from the enemy's sharpshooters was extremely heavy, as well as that of his artillery, under cover of which heavy columns of infantry were advancing upon my front and upon my right flank. Notwithstanding the inferiority of my force, and the loss already sustained, I was determined to keep my ground as long as possible, more especially when I witnessed the gallant, brave, and determined conduct of the Spanish troops on my left, who charged with the bayonet three times, and forced the enemy to retire with great loss.

I continued to maintain the positions for an hour and three quarters, exposed to an incessant fire along my front, the enemy's light troops on my right flank, and even in rear of it. I did not shrink from the propriety of halting the troops, by of falling back, until I saw the gallant Spanish troops overpowered by numbers and almost destroyed.

My left being thus uncovered, I conceived it my duty to save as many as I could collect of the battalion, and accordingly I retired, with five officers, eight serjeants, and sixty-six rank and file, under a heavy fire, and followed by the enemy's cavalry.

I beg leave to state, that nothing could exceed the brave determined conduct of the officers and men of the 2d battalion 27th regiment; and I feel it justice to mention the good conduct of Lieutenant Felix, of the royal marines, attached to the battalion.

I have the satisfaction to add, that many of the brave men, who were unavoidably dispersed during the action, have since joined; and I trust our loss altogether will not exceed two hundred men.

I am, &c.

Captain 2d Batt. 27th Reg.

Lieutenant-Colonel Carey, commanding
Catalanese Corps.

SIR, Tarragona, September 17, 1813.

AS the official reports made to the Commander of the Forces, by the different officers upon whom the command of the advance devolved, at the attack of the heights of Ordal, on the night of the 12th instant, cannot, owing to the circumstances in which the troops were placed after the heights were carried by the enemy, detail the particulars attending the loss of the brigade of guns under my command, I feel it necessary to state them to you, in order that you may be enabled to form a more favourable impression from being apprised of the head-quarters of our corps, which could only occur in consequence of the circumstances not being rightly understood.

I feel confident that the Commander of the Forces, as well as every officer in this army, are convinced of the impracticability of bringing off the guns, and will do me justice in their own minds; nevertheless should you deem it necessary to show this letter to his Excellency (to whom I have already had the honour of reporting the business verbally), you are at liberty to do so. Shortly after the action commenced Colonel Adam was severely wounded and obliged to quit the field, the command then devolved upon Lieutenant-Colonel Reeves, who perceiving that the enemy was gaining ground on all sides, gave me orders to retire with the guns: I accordingly withdrew them about one hundred yards, when perceiving that the Spanish troops who had given way on the left of the road, had rallied and returned to the charge, I halted the guns, being fearful of the effect their retreat might have on the minds of the soldiers.

Previous to this period, Lieutenant-Colonel Reeves had gone to the rear, severely wounded; Lieutenant-Colonel Carey (the next in command) was posted so far to the left, that I could receive no orders from him; all the other officers who were senior to me, were either wounded, or at so great a distance, that I was obliged to act entirely from my own judgment; but I was supported in my opinion of the propriety of halting the guns, by Major Holmes and Captain Waldron, of the 27th regiment, who agreed with me in thinking it was absolutely necessary to remain on the ground, and again to bring the guns up to the support of the Spaniards, should they be so fortunate as to repulse the enemy. But the numbers of the enemy, who continued to bring forward fresh troops, at last prevailed, and the infantry (British and Spanish) were, after a most determined and obstinate resistance, obliged to withdraw from the heights, and to retire through the mountains to the right and left of the road. I then commenced retreating with the guns, covered by about fifty cavalry (Spaniards), and an officer and twelve men of the 27th. In about half an hour the 4th hussars came up with us, and, attacking the covering party of dragoons, obliged them to retreat with so much precipitation, that, in the confusion which they occasioned by galloping past the guns on a causeway, it was impossible to unlimber; and the French cavalry followed them up so closely, that I found we were surrounded, even before I knew the cause of this sudden movement of the Spaniards.

The enemy guarded their prisoners badly; it being night I had myself the good fortune to escape by riding on with the French hussars, who continued their pursuit of the Spaniards, after they had placed a guard over the guns; and I have the satisfaction to add, that the greater part of the non-commissioned officers and gunners have effected their escape into the mountains and have joined the army, with the different detachments of infantry which have been constantly coming in since the night of the action.

Previous to the commencement of the retreat, I had been informed by Colonel Teros, commanding the Spanish troops, that the infantry were retiring along the road in rear of the guns. The very sudden movement of the French cavalry was therefore entirely unexpected on my part; as I supposed I should always have had ample notice of such an event from the rear.

Return of Killed, Wounded, and Missing of the British Force commanded by Lieutenant-General the Right Honourable Lord William Bentinck, K.B., in Action with the French Army, commanded by Marshal Suchet, on the Night of the 12th and Morning of 13th September 1813.

The number of rank and file killed, wounded, and missing in the 2d battalion 27th regiment, Calabrian free corps, rifle companies of Roll's regiment, and 4th battalion King's German legion, cannot be clearly ascertained, as these corps were obliged to disperse in the mountains. Seven hundred men have already come in, and others are known to be on their march to join the army. For the same reason it is equally impossible correctly to ascertain the loss of the Spanish brigade.

The British corps, viz. 2d battalion 27th regiment, Calabrian free corps, and rifle companies, did not exceed eleven hundred men in action.

By command of His Royal Highness the Prince Regent,
FREDERICK, Commander in Chief.
H. TORRENS,
Colonel and Military Secretary.

THE following Address has been presented to His Royal Highness the Prince Regent; which Address His Royal Highness was pleased to receive very graciously:

To His Royal Highness George Prince of Wales,
REGENT of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

The humble and dutiful Address of the Ministers and Elders of the Synod of Presbyterians in Ireland, distinguished by the name Seceders, assembled in Cookstown, the 10th July 1813.

May it please your Royal Highness,

WE, His Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Ministers and Elders of the Synod of Presbyterians in Ireland, distinguished by the name Seceders, humbly entreat your Royal Highness's permission to lay before the throne of our venerable Sovereign renewed assurances of continued loyalty and affection.

The many virtues that adorned His Majesty's private life, cannot but have endeared him to every lover of virtue and religion; and the mild, but steady and unshaken firmness, with which, through a long reign, he has maintained and directed the principles of our happy Constitution, cannot but command the veneration of all, who, with us, regard them with pride and with jealousy, as our great security for civil liberty, and as wearing the most benign aspect towards that religion which we regard still more.

With these objects before our eyes, and strongly impressing our hearts, our sympathy in His Majesty's affliction is sincere, and deep felt.

In your Royal Highness we recognise, with great pleasure, the same princely virtues, the same wisdom of counsel, the same tender solicitude for the happiness of His Majesty's people, and the same zeal to preserve their civil liberties, and to promote their religious and moral improvement, that engaged the willing and cheerful subjection of our ancestors and of us.

The necessity of war we deeply deplore; but seeing an enemy has been permitted to rise up against the common liberties of Europe, insatiable in his lust of dominion, unprincipled in his mode of warfare, and possessed of the means of hostility to an unusual extent, and seeing his most inveterate animosity is directed against the liberty, tranquillity, and prosperity of the British dominions, we feel the justice of the contest, in which His Majesty's arms are employed; and can with confidence appeal to the God of Armies, that he would direct the councils of the nation, go forth with our armies, and bring the purposes of our enemies to nought.

Deign then, august Prince, to accept our congratulation in the success that has hitherto attended His Majesty's arms, the wisdom that has governed your Royal Highness's counsels, and the confidence with which a grateful and prosperous kingdom is inspired.

In fine, gracious Prince, we humbly repeat our sincere professions of gratitude for the advantages derived to our religious communion, from the munificence of His Majesty, and your Royal Highness.
Our constant and fervent prayers are, that you may long reign happy and glorious, over a prosperous, affectionate, and loyal people.

(Signed, by Order,)

Isaac Allen, Moderator.

Copy of a Letter from Lieutenant Hare, commanding His Majesty's Schooner Bream, addressed to Captain Gordon, of the Rattler Sloop, and transmitted by Admiral Sir John Warren to John Wilson Croker, Esq.

His Majesty's Schooner Bream, St. John's, New Brunswick, June 11, 1813.

SIR, It is with much satisfaction I have the honour to inform you, when cruising off Cape Forchu, on the night of the 9th instant, I fell in with the American private armed sloop Wasp, of Salem, mounting two six-pounders carriage guns, and thirty-three men, and, after a chase of seven hours and a half, succeeded in capturing her. She commenced a smart fire on us with her great guns and small arms, which was returned, and am happy to say, without further loss or damage than one man wounded on their part. She is quite new, had been out eighteen days, and captured nothing.

I have the honour to be, &c.

(Signed)

CHARLES HARE,

Lieutenant and Commander.

Whitehall, September 30, 1813.

His Royal Highness the Prince Regent has been pleased, in the name and on the behalf of His Majesty, to give and grant unto the Reverend Samuel Johns, Master of Arts, Rector of Welwyn, in the county of Hertford, and Vicar of Allhallows, Barking, in the City of London, His Majesty's royal licence and authority, that he and his issue, may, in compliance with a clause, in the last will and testament of Thomas Knight, late of Henley Hall, in the county of Salop, Esq. deceased, take and on all occasions use the surname of Knight, in addition to that of Johns.

And also to order that the said royal concession and declaration be recorded in His Majesty's College of Arms.

that His Majesty's said licence and permission doth not authorise, and shall not be deemed or construed to authorise, the assumption of any style, appellation, rank, precedence, or privilege appertaining unto a Knight Bachelor of these realms.

And His Royal Highness hath been pleased to command, that the said royal concession and declaration be registered, together with the relative documents, in His Majesty's College of Arms.
