Board of Trade (Fisheries and Harbour Department), London, October 6, 1899.

THE Board of Trade have received, through the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, a copy of a Notice respecting quarantine issued by the Senate of Hamburg, viz. :—

(Translation.)

Hamburg.

Notice respecting precautionary measures against the plague (dated September 1st, 1899).

In order to prevent the introduction of the plague from plague-stricken ports all ships which arrive from such a port, or may have touched thereat, must, in accordance with the provisions of the law of 18th April, 1898, submit in Cuxhaven to strict sanitary police control, carried out by a physician stationed at that port under the superintendence of the Hamburg Port Physician, so that all persons on board suffering from plague, or suspected of being so affected, shall be retained in the local quarantine hospital, and the vessel shall only be allowed to proceed to Hamburg after having been disinfected.

In view of the fact that the plague has appeared in Oporto, and consequently has approached considerably nearer to German ports, the Imperial Chancellor has proposed that, in the event that, notwithstanding the precautionary measures now taken, cases of plague should be introduced, the obligation of giving notice to the authorities of cases of plague or of suspected cases, should be enforced.

The Senate therefore draws particular attention, moreover, to the provision that, according to the law affecting physicians, of December 21st, 1894, and to the regulations for putting the same into force of December 31st, 1894, physicians are obliged to notify (in the prescribed manner) to the Medical Board within twenty-four hours at most, every case of plague or of illness suspected of being plague which may come under their notice.

The obligation of giving immediate notice of any suspected case of plague is, according to section 13 of the "Medical Law of 1818" laid not only upon the physician in charge of such case, but also upon every person engaged in the treatment or care of the sick person, as also upon the head of the family, or upon the person in whose dwelling a suspected case of disease or death may have occurred. In so far as regards the urban district of the free city of Hamburg the notice must be given to the police authorities, as regards the Geestland and Marschland districts, notice must be given to the Rural Districts Administration, as regards the district of Ritzbüttel, to the Administration of that district, and as regards the district of Bergedorf, to the Mayor of Bergedorf.

Masters of sea-going ships and river craft in which, whilst they are in ports belonging to the free city of Hamburg, a case of illness or death arising from plague, or of any disease suspected as being plague, may occur, are likewise obliged (according to section 20 of the Port Regulations) to give immediate notice thereof; and in such case the notice must be given to the Port Physician at Hamburg or, in Cuxhaven, to his representative who is appointed to reside there.

Given in the Assembly of the Senate at Hamburg, September 1, 1899.
